

I find the homepage successful and very readable.

And the most important point: it is interesting. I congratulate the project actors.

A lot of work has gone into it, because it involves three different modules (art, literature and music). I spent most of my time on "literature".

These assignments really brought Shakespeare closer to the students. The plots/videos are set in their daily lives, because the videos are actually self-made, and often filmed with mobile phones. The videos are well done and very interesting!

There are also comparisons between the original play and the adapted version. And two questionnaires concerning the content.

The cooperation between the Swedish school and the VMU in Kaunas has produced convincing results.
